

Student Guide for the Academic year
2018-2019

(latest update November 20th 2018)

Who can take LITO online courses?

1. LITO Basic Business Studies are targeted only for other than business students who have a valid study right and who are registered as an attending (present) student with one of the universities listed below:

Aalto University

Lappeenranta University of Technology LUT

University of Eastern Finland

University of Jyväskylä

University of Oulu

University of Tampere

University of Turku

University of Vaasa

Åbo Akademi (quota of 30 students in the course Introduction to Corporate Social Responsibility)

2. Students who are registered with Open University only cannot take LITO courses.

3. Note, however, that your university may give more specific guidelines and restrictions for participation into the LITO courses – read carefully the study guides and guidelines given by your university.

Preparing for studies and study plan

1. Plan carefully how many and which of the LITO courses you would like and could take. You can choose any number of the 5-credit LITO courses.

2. You need a computer, an internet connection and an e-mail address in order to participate into the LITO online courses.

3. Course descriptions, learning goals etc. of the LITO courses can be found in the study guide of your university as well as on the learning platform Blackboard Open LMS (www.lito.fi).

4. It is your responsibility to ascertain that the LITO courses you plan to take are compatible with your studies and can be included in your degree. It is advisable to consult study counsellors at your own university or faculty about the compatibility of the LITO courses with and/or about the inclusion of the LITO courses in your (degree) studies.

5. Although studying online provides flexibility, the LITO courses have schedules that you need to follow. Participation in online courses requires independent initiative and systematicity as well as ability to work in concordance with the course time schedule. There are deadlines for returning exercises and taking exams. The VIBu Business Simulation Game requires your active online presence on the dates given by the course instructors. Make sure that the course dates and schedules fit with your other engagements. A five-credit course is equivalent of some 135 hours of work.

6. Make yourself a study plan and stick to it!

Access to the LITO learning platform and course registration

1. All the LITO courses are taught on the Blackboard Open LMS learning platform (www.lito.fi). You can access the platform through the HAKA authentication with the user-ID and password of your university. Make sure that you have registered as an attending (present) student with your university and that your user-ID and password are valid.

2. You need to register for the each of the courses separately. During the autumn term 2018, course registration takes place at your home university according to the instructions given by your university. Follow the deadlines for course registration as no late entries are accepted and it is not possible to have your grade registered without course registration.

3. Each course has its own access key which is sent to you together with course instructions via e-mail appr. five days before the course starts. If it seems that you have not received the access key, please check your junk mail folder before contacting the instructor or the contact person of the course.

Pre-assignment

A compulsory pre-assignment will be gradually introduced into the LITO courses during the academic year 2018–2019. The pre-assignment has to be returned by the deadline and be accepted before you can proceed with the course. Returning the pre-assignment after the deadline counts as a "fail" and you will be dropped out of the course.

Studying online

1. The LITO courses are organised in co-operation with multiple universities, and hence, the instructors of a course may also come from more than one university.

2. After you have registered with the course at the Blackboard Open LMS platform, the instructors will give specific guidelines for the completion of the course. You can reach the course contact persons via the Blackboard Open LMS –platform if you have any questions.

3. Each of the LITO courses gives you 5 ECTS, which equals 135 hours of student work. Make sure that you will have enough time for the completion of courses so that you can make the most out of your LITO studies. It is necessary that you plan carefully for your use of time when taking online courses.

4. Below you will find some links to public sites giving hints and advice to online studies – please note, however, that the sites may contain instructions that are not valid for the LITO studies:

University of Helsinki/Open University:

<https://www.helsinki.fi/en/open-university/studying/how-to-become-a-student/web-based-studies>

You can also consult the guides your own university may have for those wishing to take web-based studies.

5. Some of the LITO courses can be taken in English besides of Finnish. If you wish to take a course in English, register for the course execution in English at your home university (if possible), or contact the course instructors.

Giving course feedback

The course instructors collect feedback during the course before the course ends. Giving final feedback after the course has finished is obligatory in order to successfully complete the course. Feedback is anonymous, but the instructors can see on the Blackboard Open LMS platform who has given feedback and whose feedback is missing.

Your feedback is important for the development of the LITO courses!

Registration of study credits and the LITO study package

1. To enable registration of credits, it is necessary to transfer data about the student from his/her home university to the university that is responsible for organizing the course. The data to be transferred consists of your name (surname and first names), gender, nationality, e-mail address, personal identification number (or date of birth if the Finnish personal ID-number is missing) and the home university. Data that is classified as secret is not transferred. Without data transfer it is not possible to have the course credits registered.

2. The requirements for the completion of each course as well as the principles of the student evaluation are given in the course descriptions. If there is no final exam and you fail to pass, please contact the course instructors responsible for the course

3. When you have passed a course, the credits and grade earned will be registered at the university that organises the course. Thereafter, the credits are transferred to your own university records.

You can follow the registration of your credits at the MyStudyinfo site (OmaOpintopolku in Finnish) available at <https://opintopolku.fi/oma-opintopolku>. To use the site, you must identify yourself by using Finnish banking identification codes, mobile certificate or certificate card.

Registration of study credits and the LITO study package

If you grade and study credits have been registered at the university organising the course but not at your own university, please contact first the office for student affairs at your university (see contact persons below):
